BLAME SOUTHERN FOR TRAFFIC CONGESTION

Committee Wrestles With Question of Moving Dock Street Side Track.

MANY WANT IT TO STAY

Finally Decided to Make Personal Investigation Before Acting on Ordinance.

Before enforcing the ordinance recently adopted by the Council requiring the Southern Railway Company to change its tracks in Dock Street, the Council Committee on Streets last night decided to visit that thoroughfare and see for itself whether traffic is congested by this side track. This action followed a long hearing, when representatives of the railroad, property owners and the city and various Councilmen had discussed the matter.

General Superintendent H. E. Hutchins in charge of the northern district of the Southern Railway, presented the railroad's side of the case. He said that at a cost of $7,000 the railroad had laid the tracks according to city requirements, only a little more than two years ago. He said the company would have been glad to have placed the side track on the other side of the street, or anywhere else, had the city at that time notified it to do so. He explained that to compel the railroad to now take up the side track and lay them again appears to be an unfair proposition.

Prosperity for All. Mr. Hutchins referred to the fact that what brought prosperity to the Southern Railway brought it to Richmond. He said that the Southern Railway claims citizenship in Richmond, and that it is a part and parcel of the city. He explained that there are about 1,000 employees of the company who live in the city, and that the company is interested in the city's welfare.

In the course of his address Mr. Hutchins pointed out that the Southern Railway had put on a new passenger train, although it was stated at the time that it would not pay. He said that a recent increase in the number of employees of the road had resulted in an additional expense of more than $1,000,000, but that the railroad had not been able to raise the rates. In closing Mr. Hutchins said that congestion is not caused in Dock Street because of the tracks being there. He hoped the committee would weigh the matter carefully before putting into effect an ordinance that would necessitate an outlay of several thousands of dollars and cause a hardship on the railway company, without accomplishing any good.

Chairman Adams said that he had not intended to say much on the subject, but that some remarks that Mr. Hutchins had made moved him to change his mind. "I want to say right here," he said, "that the Southern Railway has always given Richmond the go-by." "The law provides that the general offices of the Southern Railway shall be in Richmond. They have a little office here, but the board of directors meets here and then adjourns to Washington and transacts business."

Attacks the Southern. "Since I have been a member of this committee we have always had trouble with the Southern Railway. Mr. Hutchins spoke of there being 1,000 employees of the road here. He comes here and says that it will work a hardship on his road to spend a few thousand dollars to lay this track. What has the Southern ever done for Richmond? Nothing that could get out of the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac have always been a burden on the city and fairly with the city, but we have had more trouble with the Southern than all the other roads together. Dock Street is congested by reason of this track in the center of the street, and it ought to be moved."

Mr. E. Randolph Williams, for the Southern Railway, replied briefly to Mr. Adams, saying he felt sure that it was not the desire of the committee, even Mr. Adams, to punish the Southern, but to decide the question at issue on its merits. Mr. Williams said it had been stated that the Southern had no right under the city ordinance to have its tracks in Dock Street.

CRIME EPIDEMIC SEEMS RAMPANT

Sneak Thieves Reaping Golden Harvest Without Being Caught.

EVEN INVADE CHURCHES

Police Force Inadequate, and Council Delays Action on Call for Help.

Sneak thieves are operating more extensively in Richmond than at any period in the recent history of the Police Department.

Every morning when homes and business establishments are opened, evidence comes forth that a gang has been at work. Reports are immediately made at police headquarters, though few of the crooks are ever caught. Fortunately, no large amounts have been stolen, as amounts figure in police records, though the loss in some instances has been severe on the victims. No one is safe from stealing from dwellings and stores, the robbers have turned their attention to the churches. The First Baptist, on East Broad Street, and the Grove Avenue Baptist were broken into and robbed Wednesday night. When the janitor at Beth Ahab Temple went to work yesterday morning he found that it had been robbed, but little of value was missing. This morning other reports of church robberies may be sent to the police.

Worked Other Cities. In Petersburg, South Richmond vandals have desecrated the churches, evidently on a still hunt for money. They failed to steal handsome silver communion sets in Richmond as they did in Petersburg. The police rather incline to the belief that these crimes are being committed by boys, yet boys as a rule are rather timid about going into a church after dark. If they are boys they are of the hardened type, and well worthy the attention of the police.

Day after day the record shows where this residence or the other has been ransacked. Some of these crimes were evidently the work of amateurs, while others were plainly committed by real burglars. While the police are being committed by boys, yet boys as a rule are rather timid about going into a church after dark. If they are boys they are of the hardened type, and well worthy the attention of the police.

Force Too Small. There is a great deal, however, which can be said in justification of the Police Department. The force is inadequate. It would surprise no one to find a citizen if he knew exactly how many blocks a patrolman has to cover at night. The thieves know his movements; they know where he has to be, and so they get away from him, and steal what they want, absolutely certain that they will not be disturbed by an officer.

Since the first of the year the Police Commissioners have been urging at least thirty additional men, but the petition, buffeted around from one Council committee to another, is still in the pigeon hole, with no possibility of its adoption during the life of the present Council. Indeed, there are other matters of greater importance at upon them. Salaries have been raised, the expenses of the city have been increased, and the Police Department is still in the same position.

Remedy a Harvest. With this condition of affairs it is to be expected that sneak thieves have a golden chance to reap a harvest, and they are reaping it. Many citizens are away for the summer; their homes are closed, and with the possibility of no interruption, the robbers can work quietly or otherwise, and not be disturbed by the Police.

But there is the belief that this epidemic of petty crimes will have one effect—that it will force upon Council an imperative need of providing additional men to properly safeguard the lives and the property of taxpayers.

DIED OF APOPLEXY

Henry Parsons Expired Soon After His Arrest by Police.

The coroner's jury, looking into the death of Henry Parsons who died in the Second Police Station Wednesday night, rendered a verdict that Parsons came to his death by a stroke of apoplexy. The verdict was reached yesterday after a short examination, which showed that the police were entirely blameless of the death.

Parsons was discovered by Officer Stockman a little before 9 o'clock in the vicinity of the Second Market. Officer Stockman thought that he was drunk and arrested him. Parsons declared he was ill, and when he arrived at the Second Police Station the ambulance was called.

Parsons had been well known in Richmond for a number of years. He came from a most respectable family in England. Since the death of his wife three years ago he had, because of his habits, been an almost constant charge of the city.

The body was taken to Bennett's undertaking establishment, where arrangements were made for his burial.

DABNEY BRINGS JEWELERS NEXT

Takes National Convention From Pittsburgh by Master Stroke of Eloquence.

EXHIBIT WORTH $2,000,000

Dazzling Display of Jewels to Come With Association Next Year.

Slipping away from town with a through ticket to Detroit, and without saying anything of his plans, William T. Dabney, business manager of the Chamber of Commerce, pulled off another victory in the Michigan city yesterday by capturing the convention of the American National Jewelers' Association for 1911 over Pittsburgh, which, up to the last moment, had the honor safe. The association will not only bring about 800 visitors to Richmond for the best part of a week, but it will bring a valuable exhibit valued at more than $2,000,000. The exhibit, which has never been seen before in Virginia.

Telegrams received from Detroit last night stated that the selection of Richmond as the convention city next year, when Pittsburgh claimed that it would win in a walk, was the one big surprise of the week. Though he had some assistance, Mr. Dabney was alone responsible for the result. Just as soon as he reached the convention hall he began talking up Richmond's claims. He presented the case so strongly and so forcibly that soon he had others talking up Richmond as the climax, when he was called upon briefly to show cause why the Virginia city was more entitled to it than the big, rich city of Pennsylvania.

How Dabney Did It. Exactly what Mr. Dabney said in his speech did not come over the wires last night, but it was something like this:

"Coming among you as a stranger, Mr. President and gentlemen of this magnificent convention, I crave a moment of your most valuable time to convince you of the business and commercial advantages which will result from your meeting next year in the city of Richmond. No longer do you hear sectionalism discussed; you hear the hum of industry, you hear the cheerful, optimistic talk of an awakened people, you hear the voice of a confident and gentleman of this association, that when the representatives of any great industry meet in our city there follows a revival of trade most helpful to those engaged in that particular line. When the National Association of Plaster Manufacturers and Dealers met in our magnificent city, what was the result? A great stimulus to the musical trade, the wholesale buying of musical instruments, and a sound of melody that was most pleasing to the ear. (Cheers and cries of "Go on.")

"To my mind you must go into a new territory—not into a great city which is saturated with the products which you manufacture and sell, but into new lands where the rising tide of prosperity is carrying you, mountain-like, you must display your wares in a great section which is willing, yeager, Mr. President, to invest, and I beg that you hold your next convention in the city of Richmond, where an enterprising press, ever liberal in its presentation of your meetings, showing thereby the wonderful story of your own development and progress. I beg that you meet there, to be greeted and welcomed by our distinguished Governor and our Mayor, by the citizens and the Chamber of Commerce, which will be your host. (More applause.)

"We will show you that hospitality for which Virginia has ever been famous; we will bid you taste of our fuleps, than which there is none finer in this part of the land. Richmond wants you, and your stupendous exhibit. Mr. President and gentlemen of this association, and we will safeguard you and safeguard it, guaranteeing you at the same time an audience with the wealth-producing element which has made the capital of the old Dominion the queen of convention cities. Indeed, Mr. President, I might make bold to say that you will stand in your own light if you fall to accept this most cordial invitation which we extend to you, one and all and all together." (Some more applause.)

Turned the Trick. Pittsburgh had already been heard when Mr. Dabney took the floor; when he sat down they voted, and Richmond was named.

FIRE ESCAPE GIRL PUZZLE TO POLICE

Tried to Flee From Associated Charities by Climbing Down to Street.

COULD NOT CONTROL HER

Dr. Buchanan Forced to Deliver Mabel Gordon to Officers of Law.

Without the help of friends, absolutely alone in the world, and mentally deficient, Mabel Gordon, an eighteen-year-old girl from Rockingham county, N. C., presented a case last night to Sergeant Peter, of the First Police Station, that was pathetic in the extreme. She had been with the Associated Charities officers since Tuesday night, and it was only yesterday that they found that they were unable to cope with her. The disposition to room, which is found in the majority of the mentally deficient cases, was apparent in her mind, and the officers thought it best to turn her over to the police.

Mabel Gordon came to Richmond last Tuesday afternoon and was discovered by Officer Braden of the Southern Railway Station. She had come from Danville, and on the train a kind-hearted woman had asked for her, and she took her to the Associated Charities building, where she was received.

First Tried to Escape. In the First Police Station last night she presented a sight that was calculated to move the heart of a Caligula. Of that half-wild mental disposition which seems almost capable and yet absolutely futile, it was a problem to the police how to treat her. Had she been patient and sane they would have had no difficulty, or had she been of the vicious type they would have been able to take care of her. But she was unable and unable to take care of herself.

The informed Dr. Buchanan that she was a very nice, quiet girl, and she wanted a place to stay until she could find work. A passerby who was going down Franklin Street yesterday afternoon saw a girl crawling down the fire escape and called to her to go back or she might hurt herself. His call brought the attention of those in the building, and Mr. Maarten of the Associated Charities came out to see what was wrong. They identified the runaway as the Cornish girl, and she was called down to the office there.

Told Sad Story. It seems that when she was a small girl her parents died and she was taken to the home of an old man in Rockingham county, N. C., where she lived until a few weeks ago. In the latter part of June the old man died, leaving her alone in the world. She was told that she had cousins in Danville, and she went there, but could not find them, without fail. She was told that a friend in the whole town.

A group of young men in Danville saw her in a station subbing, and one of them asked her to go with him. She told him that she wanted to go, but he told her that she was wrong. She told him that she wanted to go, but he told her that she was wrong. She told him that she wanted to go, but he told her that she was wrong.

It was only after the girl had been with the Associated Charities for nearly two days that Dr. Buchanan, who was unable to take care of her, and utterly unable to take care of her, then he decided that she would be better off in the police station, and she was taken to the station.

Utterly unable to appreciate her position last night, the girl was a most pitiable figure. The police had made her as comfortable as possible and had but the fact that she could not go home, where she wanted to go, and her detention was against her.

The girl will be brought before Justice Campbell this morning, and she will decide as to her disposition.

Magistrate Puryear saw them and sent them to jail. After the boys had been in jail all night, they were released. The boys were fined $1 on account of their age.

NEW SOCIETY WRINKLE IS FIERCE ON FOUR-FLUSHERS

To Be Smart, You Must Engrave Names of Your Ancestors on Your Visiting Card, and Man With Most Can Take the Pot.

If you are at all fashionable, with a pedigree reaching back to the time the plans and specifications for the Mayflower were filed with the building inspector, you will quickly adopt this new wrinkle which comes out of White Salmon, Wash., and engrave the names of your ancestors on the back of your visiting card. A local celebrity said yesterday that the idea was decidedly an art, that it was an excellent innovation, and that if the record were properly certified it would force an army of four-flushers to take to the high brush. Then, for instance, when a young man called on a young woman and asked for the parental approval, all he would have to do was requested to tell of his ancestors would be to reach into his pocket and flash a card. It would be right there on the card, engraved. The White Salmon plan gives the name of everybody in the family, without stating whether any member is in jail.

Colonel William Skillett, for example, would have printed—it would be too expensive to see an engraver—on his visiting card the name of Mrs. Nish Skillett, her father, grandfather and great-grandfather, his father and mother, together with the front name of each of the ten young Skilletts. Then if anybody declared that Colonel Skillett was not in society, after he had gone to the expense of printing something about his family tree, there would be a fight.

In the same way the brighter social light could even give some divorce statistics, some high financing and all that sort of thing or not give it. Society must be on the run continually; if it isn't a new fangled dress it must be a new fangled visiting card. Society hasn't reached that point yet, as a policeman in the Second District remarked last night, where the coat of arms can be embossed on the door to the door to the butler's pantry, so the next best thing is the card. Then when ten or a dozen men meet at a railway station and the train is late they could amuse themselves by matching cards. Like the man predicted, will come a time when the man with the biggest bunch of brothers in the family tree industry. And the family tree is one kind of wood pulp that can't be ground into white paper. To make with the high card would be some dog indeed.

FACULTY ELECTS SIMPSON DEAN BEING ORGANIZED

Dental Department of University College of Medicine Makes Important Change.

At a meeting last night of the dental department faculty, University College of Medicine, Dr. L. M. The automobile suffered about $50 damage to the mud guards and frame.

Andrew Wallace Fined.

Andrew Wallace, of 1131 North Thirty-fifth Street, was fined $5 and put under $100 bond to keep the peace for twelve months by Justice Crutchfield in Police Court yesterday.
